Dear friends,

During my teen years, I would join my grandad, every six weeks or so, when he went along to the local town museum as a steward. The museum was out of the town centre – about 15 mins walk away – and was virtually hidden away up some treacherous ‘back stairs’ on the first floor of the Town’s Council Buildings. At the time – the early 1990s – it was a collection of 3 very small rooms, each coming off of a small corridor which was itself packed with artefacts. There was a room that showed the history of the town, and one that showed local farming history. In time for the 50th anniversary of VE Day, they opened the third room to show the town during the war. It even had a computer in it – although we never really worked out what it did! If we had more than a handful of people pay us a visit on a two-hour opening slot, we felt it had been a worthwhile afternoon.

My grandad had been a keen member of the Museum Society, and he would often speak to me during our quiet afternoons there about their plan to ‘Build for the Future’ and to acquire a site and premises that would be up to scratch and fit for purpose. They had a vision of a museum that was more than the dry, dull looking history that they had in their inaccessible three rooms, but rather something that brought the history alive, was relevant to people’s lives in the town and further afield, could engage with their local community and context and could interest the young while the old could connect with things from their past.

They succeeded in opening a new museum in 2006, in a prime, town centre location, and opening five days per week. They knew that the way they had traditionally displayed their history would not be sufficient for their new premises. So they ‘Built for the Future’ and remodelled their displays to make them more accessible and engaging for a variety of people in new and interesting exhibitions, and displaying the collections in ways that people of all ages and backgrounds can learn more about the town and its heritage. This museum, like so many others (the exhibitions at Woodhorn spring to mind), have realised that it is possible to share tradition and history without being stuck in traditional ways.

Churches are often thought of as dull, dry, museums to the past that hold onto ways of doing things – and attitudes to the world – that are not in keeping with the life of many people in our communities. It’s true that we have a history and heritage to hold on to. But that history and heritage isn’t fixed in how Churches came into existence in the last century, or even how our Nonconformist forebears stood themselves apart at the Reformation. Instead, we have a heritage – a tradition – that we find in the pages of the Bible, where we learn how Jesus continually spoke against the prevailing ‘religious’ culture of the time (its “tradition”) and instead spoke of being inclusive, engaging, learning about and with one another about how to be a faithful community in the world. For us, being “traditional” should not mean that we are fixed in pews or with hymns and songs written in previous centuries, but should mean that we turn back to Jesus who invites us to share together, in new and creative ways, in the worship of God. Churches are not called to be museums to the past, but to be living traditions of Jesus people whose worship and discipleship shows God’s love to the world – who want to look one another in the face and share together in praise and thanksgiving to a God who gives us all our past traditions and all our future days.

Blessings,

The latest items for purchase are our special new idea of a present for graduation of a wise owl in cap and gown. He also wears spectacles to show his intelligence! This owl comes in 2 colours - BLUES and ORANGES with black mortarboard and gown. It also carries a scroll. These can be ordered from Barbara Burgess and cost £15.

Our other new item is Sir Peregrine Penguin - a very dashing bird in top hat and tails, £10.

The very simple velvet teddy is from our everyday section, and costs only £1.50.

Our unicorns, not seen here, are still on the market!

These are original designs, and I feel would sell anywhere for a lot more!

If you would like to join us, we meet at St Andrew's on Mondays at 10 am. You would be very welcome!

59 days – the length of the Israelite's journey
from Egypt to Mount Sinai

Last year, a few members from St Andrew's took place in the parade to mark the opening of Newcastle Pride. The parade takes a long (but steady) walk around the centre of Newcastle and up to Exhibition Park. We joined with the Northern Lights Church to be a group of Christians walking together.

This year, we're hoping to join with more Christians and walk the parade route in a larger number than last year. The Parade takes place on Saturday 21st July at 12 noon. We'll meet outside St Thomas's Church (at the Haymarket) at 11.45. The church will be open for refreshments from 11. The theme for the parade this year is the Rainbow, so it should be very colourful.

If you're interested in taking part, please speak to Matthew or Lucy.

Granny's Attic raised another £2,900 in May, helping us to end the month with a surplus.

Expenditure in May has included some repairs to the roof, where water was leaking in at the rear of the church above the sound desk. We are also have an increase of £84 in our Ministry and Mission expenditure to Synod, where, despite our total number of members decreasing, the "per member" cost set by Synod has increased by a greater amount.

The Maxwell Family & St. Andrew's

It was with sadness that we recently heard the news that Eric Maxwell had died. The Maxwell family connection with St Andrew's is in relation to our Nativity light box in the chancel and two smaller light boxes in the side aisle.

The window had originally been installed in the former Gosforth URC and had been commissioned by Eric and his brother, with the aid of Gordon Connacher, who was minister at that church at the time. When the church closed and became a fish restaurant the window was supposed to remain in the property. Its removal was spotted by a member of the congregation who informed Eric's nephew, Keith, who lives locally. It was discovered that it had been sold to a reclamation firm in Bristol not far from where Eric lived and he was therefore able to purchase it and then seek Gordon's help in finding a new home for it. When St Andrew's readily accepted the window, the Maxwell family organised and paid for its installation and subsequently came to the service of dedication.

Eric continued to take a keen interest in St Andrew's future plans and we kept in touch with both Keith and Eric from time to time, as well as regularly through Newstand which Eric much appreciated and enjoyed.

It was no surprise therefore in 2010 to receive a letter from Eric except this time it was on formal 'Maxwell Family Foundation' paper. Briefly the charity which Eric had established through his business at Bristol was to be wound up, after one major final project, with any balance of funds being donated to "those causes with whom we have had a happy relationship for many years". St Andrew's was included "because of the kindness shown" to Eric and the family, and in admiration of the Building for the Future project. Enclosed was a cheque for £10,000.

I thought I'd pen a few lines about the seating arrangements at church.

Like many people at our church, and other churches, if I'm not participating with a reading or prayers, I tend to take a seat somewhere in the middle. It's familiar and comfortable – don't want to seem “pushy” by being at the front, or “reluctant” by being at the back. Over time, one tends to become possessive of one's chosen seat.

With the decline in numbers of Junior Church who, with their teachers, always tended to occupy the front rows, it became apparent that whomever was leading the worship was starting to look a bit “lonely” and distant, because of the empty rows.

I resolved to lead by example and go to the front. On the very morning that Kath and I were to put this into action, we found a new seating plan with the front rows rotated to the sides of the church. We pressed on regardless and took our places at the new front rows. All I can say is “Wow!” The worship experience is so much more inclusive, more personal and more intense. You're right there, with whomever is talking and very much a part of it. You're not just a polite spectator at a comfortable distance. It's very much a case of “This person is talking to me”. The whole experience is more profound.

To anyone who may be contemplating moving forwards, to fill the empty spaces, I'd say “Come and join me, right in the midst of the action, and loving every minute of it”

Northumbria Healthcare

NHS Foundation Trust

I have been successful through an uncontested election to be returning as a Public Governor for Northumbria Healthcare NHS Foundation Trust. The local hospitals of “Cramlington”, officially known as The Northumbria Emergency Care Hospital, your local hospital at North Tyneside General (Rake Lane) and further afield, Wansbeck, Hexham and the Community hospitals at Blyth, Alnwick and Berwick.

The NHS celebrates 70 years this year and I am looking forward to attending a dedication service at Hexham Abbey.

We now have a new model of care being unveiled in October of this year, where the Urgent Care Centre will firmly remain at North Tyneside Hospital but with enhanced GP telephone cover. The centre will still close at midnight and reopen at 8 a.m. During the night, all urgent care will be through the Northumbria Hospital at Cramlington. It has been found that it is just not viable, safe or sensible to have the Urgent Care Centre open through the night; the footfall is minimal. There is a new Blue Zone now at Cramlington, which facilitates patients walking through the front door and this hopefully will give speedier access through A&E. I know patients who have experienced going there by ambulance are very efficiently treated.

I hope as one of three Whitley Bay Public Governors you, the church family at St Andrew’s and friends also, will come to me with any queries you may have about our immediate hospitals, appointments and things that may be bothering you. I can try to help and steer you in the directions of our Call Centre and other ways of communicating well with your local Health Trust.
